The Dodgers tied it in the ninth. Hank De Berry doubled to left field. With Bert Griffith, who batted for Grimes, and High out, Johnston drove a long hit to right center. It was good for a triple but Johnston made a desperate effort to make the whole circuit on it. Janvrin, who went in to run for De Berry, scored, but Johnston was nieked at the plate. With the train puffing in the offing and Robinson puffing in the dugout the score was tied in the ninth.

	Rosey Ryan, the Giant plicher, was the first to fall in this historic skirmish in the Battle of the Boroughs. Rosey passed High and Johnson, the first two up in the first inning. Johnson drove a hit to right field and scored High. Immediately thereafter the stretcher bearers took Rosey right out of the lot. He was replaced by Claude Johnson of the famous Johnson brothers. Wheat lifted a fly to center and Johnson scored. In the third inning Tommy Griffith annoyed Mr. Johnson's considerably by driving a homer into the right field stands. That gave the Dodgers a three run lead in all and there was nothing to indicate that history was about to be made until the Giant half of the same	the eleventh, Cadore going in for the Dodgers after Irish Meusel had tapped Dazzy Vance for a two bagger. Cadore started by walking Young. Kelly laid down a sacrifice which brought to the bat none other than Casey Stengel. Cddere passed him purposely and filled the bases with only one out. It looked like the finish, but Smith popped to short and Snyder hoisted to right. In the thirteenth the Dodgers would have won but for lack of accuracy on the part of Schmandt's feet as hereinbefore related. When this inning passed with no score Uncle Wilbert Robinson whispered plaintively to Moran, "How about our train?" The umpires consulted and decided that one more inning must be played.
